CUTTING GOVERNMENT TIMBER.

United States Marshall Arrests John Labby and Kline.

John Labby fled on a homestead several days after Dec. 20, last year and on the 20th Mike Ryan settled on the same claim. The rulings of both local and general land offices would debar Labby from any show of getting the land in question, but he evidently considers it only necessary to obtain a local land office receipt for fees in order to obtain full possession of any homestead desired. He has cut a large amount of timber from the claim, and hauled it to the creek, despite Ryan's notice to him that he had better wait until they found out who the claim belonged to. Labby imagined that he was making a farm, that Ryan was an intruder and that he had a perfect right to cut and sell the timber. Complaint was finally entered by Ryan against Labby and Kline, the latter for assisting in the cutting and selling. The United States Marshall at Madison on Tuesday telegraphed Sheriff Mericle to arrest both men. Yesterday they were taken to Madison for their hearing.

The Brown-Spencer Nuptials.

This evening at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents in Wau-paca, will occur the wedding of Edward O. Brown, of this city, to Miss Clara Spencer. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Weller, pastor of the Stevens Point Episcopal church, and will be witnessed by only a few relatives and near friends. The bridesmaid will be Miss Maynard Spencer, sister of the bride, and E. Wilson Brown, of Chicago, a cousin of the groom, will act as groomsmen. The newly wedded couple will leave for Washington and eastern cities for a few weeks trip, before returning here.

The contracting parties are both so well known to our readers that any laudation of them would prove superfluous. Miss Spencer has many friends here, gained during her residence in the city as teacher of the J. C. Curran school. E. O. Brown is one of the foremost business men of the place; a man whose ability, character and position is such that his friends who wish them many happy returns of the day are numbered by his acquaintances. The NEW NORTH joins the throng in well wishes.

Bad Accident at Hazelhurst.

The Yawkey & Lee Lumber Company's log train on their private railroad was ditched Saturday while backing up from the mill to the skidway. The foremost car ran onto an obstruction across the track, throwing it off and piling the other cars up in a badly demolished state. Four men, all employees of the company, were seriously injured. Dave Kirhan had his jaw bone broken and received a number of bad cuts about the head. James O'Malley was bruised and badly cut on both limbs. John Clark had an arm fractured and P. O'Malley a badly sprained leg. Others were slightly hurt. The company's loss is considerable on their rolling stock. Being insured in a casualty and accident company, as nearly all lumber firms are, they escape a large loss in remunerating the men, who are also benefited by the insurance, as they will receive their pay and expenses during the time they are necessarily idle.

Obituary Notice.

Mrs. Nettie Hunter Butts, wife of Chas. Butts, died Feb. 18, with combination of bronchial and heart trouble. She was the daughter of Frederick and Sarah Hunter; was born in Deerfield, Mich., Aug. 7, 1865, being 27 years old at the time of her death. She married Chas. Butts May 19, 1886; converted in Mill Brook, Mich., 1889; joined the Congregational church in that place, and came to Rhinelander July, 1891. She was a consistent and devoted Christian. She leaves a husband and one son and a number of relatives and friends who sympathize with the bereaved husband. The text, Rev. 14, 13 vs., Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, was selected by her husband. The sermon was preached by the Rev. D. C. Savage at the home of Mr. Isaac Wedge, Friday, Feb. 19, at 2 p. m. Mark the perfect and behold the upright for their end is peace.

Wood For Sale.

I offer for sale 400 cords of 4-foot wood, mixed hard and soft. It is within a mile of the business portion of the city. Price $1.25 per cord on ground, $1 sold in a lump. E. B. CROFOOT.

A LUMBER TRAIN.

The Lake Shore Makes a Valuable Addition to Its Service.

Last Tuesday the Lake Shore road began running a lumber train from Rhinelander, which will prove of great benefit to the local lumbermen, and should prove a help to considerable business for the enterprising road. The train will leave here at 6:30 p. m. daily, taking all loaded lumber cars, and picking up lumber at points down the line, thence running through direct to Milwaukee. This will give the Rhinelander firms the service they need and have desired. A car which they finish loading at night will go out immediately instead of being taken the next day by a local freight. The amount of lumber handled by the Lake Shore here is of such magnitude and the coming season's shipments will be so large, that the road is giving substantial evidence of its intention to look out for the business sharply.

Mrs. Taylor in Limbo.

Pat. Gardner, as an officer of the law and a preserver of peace, while at Woodboro last week on official duty, visited the Taylor dispensary and while there, an invitation of a friend who had money, absorbed about four fingers of old willer-run. Inasmuch as the license for selling it hasn't yet been issued, and Pat had the necessary evidence, he made a return trip and brought back Mollic, Felix Taylor's wife, who was arraigned before Justice Nicholds on a charge of selling liquor without a license. She plead guilty and was fined $50 in lieu of which she took 60 days in jail. Gardner's prompt and vigorous nabbing of the offenders, his consummate skill in catching the sly rascals, the fortitude with which he placed about a pint of the stuff under his belt, in order to make a sure case, and the ability with which he stood up under the load, has called forth encomiums from all ranks and classes of society.

Improving the Mills.

The annual repairing of local mills to put them in readiness for the season's running, commenced this week. Brown & Robbins have the ordinary fixing up to do in addition to an entire change in the boiler room, where something like $1,500 will be put into remodeling of the boilers, by putting in a number of more flues, giving more steam capacity. Olson & Mickeljohn have the usual amount of repairing and overhauling, which is being done under the supervision of Mr. Mickeljohn. Low Annis is at work in Brown's mill, with a crew of men, putting it in shape to start. The Buttrick mill will also be overhauled and gotten ready to start soon, by this firm, who will in all probability run it the coming season. They will saw custom work, and can thus give it a full stock. The Stevens' mill new band saw has arrived, and is being put in, in place of the rotary. They are making a number of improvements, and will have the mill ready to start up night and day when the lake opens. Conroy & Son, who have been considering the advisability of putting in a band, have not yet fully decided to do so, but are otherwise getting the mill in shape to start. The Rhinelander Lumber & Shingle Company mill will go through with a slight overhauling, and start promptly on their logs now coming in over the Lake Shore road. The outlook is good for a considerable increase in even the heretofore published amount of lumber to be sawed here this season.

The Merry Masquerades.

The John A. Logan Post, G. A. R. is at least $50 better off than they were Monday, and all on account of the financial success of their masquerade. There were about one hundred couples in attendance, and the affair throughout was a pleasant one for those attending. The supper, furnished by A. Mettayer, fully satisfied the requirements, and was partaken of by nearly all the dancers. Music was furnished by Squeirs, Ulrich and Morton.

On the same evening over one hundred tickets were sold for the masquerade at the Rhinelander Opera House. The hall was crowded with dancers, and a general good time was had by all. This dance was given under the management of George O'Donnell and Peter Lavin; and another party, not a masquerade, however, will be given Saturday evening.

Jersey suits at Shafer's.

PRIDEAUX TO BE OUSTED.

The District Attorney Commences Suit Against the Superintendent.

Acting under instructions of the county board, District Attorney Shelton has prepared and served upon A. D. Prideaux, who was elected superintendent of this county's schools at the last election, papers in a suit to have the court declare his office vacant. The complaint, printed herewith, contains a brief statement of the situation with regard to his drawing a salary from Oneida county for which he gives nothing. The summons notifies Mr. Prideaux that on the 21st day of March, before Judge Bardeen, at Wausau, a motion will be made to remove him from office, the motion being based upon a petition which is signed by Cy. C. Yawkey, one of the best citizens of the county. After the averment that petitioner is a tax payer and resident of Oneida county, and that Prideaux was elected at the last general election to the office of county superintendent, that he duly qualified, and has held the position since, it charges him with both incompetency to perform the duties and wilful neglect of them, and proceeds to turn the hose on him in the following particulars:

(1.) He has, during the whole of the time since he entered upon the duties of his office, as aforesaid, wilfully neglected and refused to visit any of the schools in said county, except those in the village of Rhinelander, although there were many schools and districts in said county outside of said village.

(2.) He has wilfully neglected and refused to inquire in any manner into the management, course of study, mode of instruction, and discipline of the schools outside of the village of Rhinelander, or of the school houses, sites or out-buildings.

(3.) He has wilfully neglected and refused to report annually or at any time to the county board the condition of the schools under his supervision.

(4.) He has wilfully neglected and refused to organize or conduct any institute for the instruction of teachers.

(5.) He has wilfully neglected and refused to divide his county into three inspection districts as required by law, and has failed to hold the examinations required by law.

(6.) He has wilfully neglected and refused to give private examinations to teachers who have been unable to attend upon any public examinations, although he was informed and knew that there were not enough qualified teachers in the said county, to teach all the schools therein.

(7.) He has wilfully made false reports to the state superintendent of the number of children who had attended school in the towns of Pelican and Hazelhurst in said county; in schools taught by a qualified teacher for the time required by law, in order to deprive said towns of a portion of their share of the state school fund.

(8.) He has wilfully given to certain teachers and in particular to May Conroy and to Kate McCarthy licenses and certificates to teach in said county without having examined them as to their qualifications as required by law.

(9.) That since Sept. 1, 1891, there have been twenty-nine school districts and departments in session in said county and that nevertheless he has wilfully absented himself from the said county and has not been within the limits of said county since said date while said schools were in session, nor given them his attention in any manner, although many of said schools were newly organized and all of them greatly needed his attention.

Settled Out of Court.

The differences between the Town Board and School Board with regard to the tax levy this year has been settled satisfactorily to both sides without further redress to law or juries. The town board give to the school board a $2,000 drainage fund order, which amount will be used as far as possible by the board. The amicable settlement of the case avoids not only the further prosecution of an unpleasant contest, but saves considerable of a cost to tax-payers who would have had to foot the bill for the litigation.

HEAVY TAX PAYERS.

Some of the Many Who Furnish the Wherewith For Pelican.

The list of tax payers in the town of Pelican who pay into the treasury annually over $500, is a pretty good sized one. The list is principally composed of lumbermen, and is headed by Brown Bros. who have paid this year $5,800. The next highest payer is Geo. E. Wood, who drew his check for almost $2,500. Others above the five hundred mark are Bray & Choate, 1,300; Coon & Chace, 500; Schroll & Arens, 1,100; Wis. River Land Co. 700; Brown & Robbins, 1,800; Underwood Lumber Co., 1,100; Olson & Mickeljohn, 700; Conroy & Son, 1,410; Baldwin & Kullen, 700; See Lumber Co., 1,500; Stevens & Son, 800; Nelson Lumber & Brown Co., 600; John Curran, 600; Rhinelander Lumber & Shingle Co., 600; First Nat. Bank, 900; Merchants State Bank, 900; H. P. Christy, 700; Lake Shore Ry. Co. & Traffic Co. 500; W. H. Bradley, 700; Menasha Wooden Ware Co., 650; Bliss & Parsons, 700; Land, Log & Lumber Co. $1,100.

Will Harrigan is in Milwaukee on a business trip.

Robert Langdon, of Hurley, visited his brother Mike here last week.

A little son made its appearance at the home of D. L. Jenkinson yesterday. It is an eight pounder.

Mrs. Irvin Gray's condition continues to be serious. She is now prostrated with a lung difficulty.

James Gleason's meat market has been moved into the corner store, next door to its former location.

The few warm days this week have settled the snow so much that lumbermen are hoping for a cold snap.

Help wanted at the Steam Laundry. Experienced help can secure permanent employment. Inquire at the Laundry.

Rev. Humphreys and wife returned from their trip in the lower country this morning. Mr. Humphreys is considerably improved in health.

Shafer has the finest line of spring clothing for men and boys ever shown in town. The assortment is large and the prices as small as you are looking for.

Louie Stern is closing out his stock preparatory to leaving for some new location—as yet undecided upon. Mr. Sterns and family will leave many friends here.

John W. Ferton, now with the Yawkey & Lee Lumber Co., of Hazelhurst, has accepted the position of superintendent for the Brown Bros. Lumber Co., of this place.

Ed. Brazell got himself into a snap when he offered the boys in Beers & Brazell's camp an oyster supper if they put in 50,000 in a day. They promptly made it 57,000. The oysters were sent up to-day in a refrigerator car.

Maggie Maloney and Alice Dodge, of Woodboro, had some little differences the other day, and Maggie got the best of it. Her victory was only temporary however, as a minion of the law in the person of P. Gardner brought her before Justice Nicholds, where she was assessed twelve dollars for the fun.

This winter has been a severe one on people with unsettled health. At present the sick list in the village is diminishing rapidly, and but one case of diphtheria exists. It is that of a young lady employed at the Lake View House. Her case is a mild one however. Ezra Chace who has had a long and severe siege, is slowly mending. Mrs. G. W. Bishop, who is again down with rheumatism, is some better. An epidemic of whooping cough has been doing the best it could to fill the place left by the older and more experienced ailments, and has succeeded very well. A large number of children have it.

The dwelling house on King street occupied by Anthony Wood, and owned by Browne Bros., caught fire this morning from a defective chimney. Mrs. Wood's well-developed alarms soon attracted the attention of passers and the blaze was extinguished without much damage being done. The building was insured.

HER FATHER'S VICTIM.

"GOOD-BY" SHE MURMURED.

"Oh, of course not," said Pearson with a light laugh. "Though I think I could guess where you have been over to try. How are the Greens coming on?"

The tone in which this question was asked together with the leering manner of the speaker implied a direct insult, and Paul took it as such. He had, moreover, had an intimation of Pearson's visits to Green's, and he now associated him in some way with Louise's conduct and felt inclined to hold him responsible for it. He was sensitive, and it required but little to raise his temper, and it was not strange under the circumstances that Pearson's words stung him, and that he should reply sharply.

"If the Greens are anything to you," said he, "and you are anxious to know how they are coming on, I suppose you have the privilege of going there to find out for yourself."

"Thanks," replied Pearson, "I shall do as you suggest, and I hope, in fact, I think my reception there will be different from yours."

The next instant Paul had lost all self-control, and with all his strength put into his arm he gave Pearson such a stroke with his fist that it sent him rolling to the ground limp and apparently lifeless.

Paul did not wait to see what had been the extent of the damage of his stroke, but galloped on, leaving Pearson to the care of a couple of men who at that moment drove up in a wagon.

"Is he dead?" asked one of the men as the other bent over the lifeless body.

"I think not," said the other, "but he got a terrible lick, sure, and it will take him a few days to get over it. We had better get him back to town if we can, as there is no place near here to leave him."

"Guess we had," replied the first, "but I wonder who that man is that hit him. I saw him strike."

"So did I. But whoever he is, you may bet I don't want him to strike me. My! but that was an awful lick, and I'd about as soon be struck by lightning as that man's arm."

"Wonder what it was about, anyhow?"

"I don't know, and I guess it don't concern us what it was about. Let's get this chap in the wagon and haul him to town. He needs some sort of attention."

They raised Pearson up to put him in the wagon, and he opened his eyes and looked about him.

"Where am I, and what has happened?" he asked in a weak voice.

"You're right here," said one of the men, "and it looks as though that chap who hit you come right taking your head off. He gave you a terrible black eye, sure."

Slowly Pearson began to recall what had happened to him, and he grew angry and tried to spring up. But he found that he had sustained a greater injury than he had thought. One of his limbs had caught under him when he fell, and had been thrown out of position. With a cry of pain he sank back to the ground.

"Curse Paul Maricham," he muttered. "He has put me in a nice pickle, and laid me up for a week, perhaps, when there is not a day to lose."

The men got him in the wagon, and within an hour left him in bed in his room at Maggie City.

CHAPTER XXIV.
A BROKEN LIMB.

Dr. Bascom had not forgotten his promise to aid Green in getting some money if possible. He had tried every means in his power, visited all the money lenders and everyone else from whom it seemed probable the money might be obtained. He paid several visits to Seraggs' office, before Seraggs' return, and again he went there on the day that Pearson received his injuries at Paul's hands. On this last occasion he found Seraggs at home, and at once made known to him his errand.

"Yes," said Seraggs, in reply to the old doctor's statement, "I will let Green have some money. He might have had it before this if I had known he was in such desperate straits. Have you been out to Green's within the last few days?"

"No, not since nearly a week."

"I asked because I wished a little information on a certain point. I have understood since my return that young Pearson has been going out there frequently of late, and I thought perhaps you might know if it was true."

"I know nothing of it. I have never met him there on the occasion of any of my visits."

"I suppose such is the case, however, and some steps ought to be taken to break it up. He has devilish designs on Green's girl, and I'm afraid he has Green in his power, and if he is permitted to go on in his own way he will bring the girl to ruin. Something ought to be done at once to thwart him if possible."

"That's true," said the doctor, "that's true. But this is all news to me. I have had no intimation of anything of that sort, and never dreamed of such a thing, or I certainly should have taken some steps to stop it. But how has Pearson managed to get Green in his power?"

"Easy enough," replied Seraggs, and he went on to tell about Mills' loan and John's sale of the wagon and team. "I have kept a watch on this affair, and by the aid of my clerk have kept posted on the proceedings from first to last. Green has laid himself liable to a term in state prison, and as I have just today discovered, Pearson is all that stands between him and the law. If Green's girl will submit to Pearson's desires Green can go free, but if she does not then Green is to be prosecuted. So you see how the matter stands, and how necessary it is to take immediate steps to thwart Pearson."

"Yes, I see. The good-for-nothing rascal has got the whole Green family in his clutches, and the girl must sacrifice herself to save her father and mother, and she'll do it, too. She'll do anything and suffer anything to spare them. It must be prevented, Seraggs."

"It must if it is possible, but I am at a loss how to get at it. Of course we could pay off Mills' (or rather Pearson's) note, but that won't let Green out. He would still be as open to prosecution as ever. I don't know what we can do."

"I know one thing I can do," said the old doctor as he arose and angrily paced the floor. "I can come Pearson, confound his impudent picture, and it wouldn't take me long to do it, either."

"I'm afraid that wouldn't help matters much, though," laughed Seraggs.

"Perhaps not, but it would do me lots of good. But have you no plan, Seraggs?"

"No, I haven't. I have thought, however, that it might be a good idea to find out who and where Green's friends are, and to write to them stating his condition and asking them for some assistance. I don't know that that would do much good, but it might do some. I suppose he has friends in the east somewhere, and we could learn from him who they are."

"It is not necessary to go to that much trouble," said the doctor, "as I already possess that information, so far as Green's wife's father is concerned."

"Do you?" Then that's soon arranged. Now there was another thing I was thinking of doing. This Pearson has an uncle in Ohio of whom he is a sort of ward. This uncle is the head of the 'Bakey Loan and Trust Company,' which I represent, and he and this Pearson are all there is of the company, and the uncle furnishes the capital and Pearson gets the profits. I am fearful that it won't avail much, but I Seraggs' tumultuous and unlooked for outburst.

"Wouldn't I?" repeated Seraggs. "Well, I just would, and I'd give him such a caning as no man ever got. But here, this sort of talk is not to the point. We must act. We must hustle ourselves to get old Blatchford out here. I'll send him a telegram at once," and then and there Seraggs penned the message, which Blatchford received the day of Aunt Mitchell's explosion, and which has been mentioned in a previous chapter. Calling his clerk, Seraggs sent the message off, then turning to the doctor, said:

"Now, I think Blatchford will come, and it will be nearly a week before he gets here, and, in the meantime, we must manage in some way to delay Pearson's plans. We must save the girl from him and we must keep Green out of the clutches of the law."

"That's so," replied the doctor, "that's so. But I don't just see how it's to be done. Perhaps, though, Pearson will not bring matters to an issue at once. Perhaps we will have plenty of time, if we only succeed in keeping our scheme quiet."

"I think not," said Seraggs. "I believe from what information I have been able to gather that he has already made his proposition to the girl. I know this much: He has purchased two tickets for Denver and has arranged for a livery rig to drive into the country to-morrow night. I am confident his intention is to drive out to Green's at night and bring the girl here in a close carriage, and with her take the train for the west."

"Then what can we do, Seraggs?" the doctor asked. "How can we prevent this thing in so short a time?"

"I don't know, I'm sure."

At that instant the office door was thrown open and a man came breathlessly in.

"Doctor," he cried, "come quick. Pearson has received a severe injury and needs immediate attention. I have been all over town in search of you."

"Oh? What's that?" the doctor cried, starting up.

The man recounted all he knew of Pearson's meeting with Paul and the encounter that followed, and ended by saying:

"I'm sure his leg is broken, besides other serious injuries."

"I wish to heaven it had been his neck instead of his leg," cried Seraggs. "Aye," said the doctor aside to Seraggs, "but a leg is better than nothing, and if we can't have what we want we must take what we can get."

"Are you going to him?" Seraggs asked.

"Yes, indeed. You wait here an hour or so and I'll see you again."

With that the doctor went out and down the street to Pearson's room. He found Pearson in a semi-unconscious condition, and proceeded to make an examination of his injuries. At first he was inclined to treat them rather lightly, but on second thought he changed his mind and his face took on a grave air and he shook his head dubiously.

"Is he badly hurt, doctor?" some one asked.

"Bad enough to keep him in bed for several days, sure," the doctor replied. "We must splint and bandage this limb and he must be kept perfectly quiet for the present."

Accordingly the limb was duly arranged, the bruises about the face dressed, and, after again repeating his injunctions in regard to keeping the patient quiet, the old doctor withdrew and returned to Seraggs.

"Now, Seraggs," he said, as he entered the office, "we've got a good chance to carry out our plan. We've got Pearson laid up with a broken leg, and if we can get old Blatchford out here before he gets up and about we're all right."

"Great heavens, man! we can certainly do that. Blatchford ought to get here inside of six days, and I should think it would take a broken leg several weeks to heal."

"Yes, ordinarily it does take several weeks, but in this case it won't."

"Won't? Why not?"

"Because," and the doctor advanced and sunk his voice to a whisper, "because, Seraggs, there ain't any broken leg in this case."

"What?" cried Seraggs. "I don't catch your meaning."

"I mean that Pearson's leg is not broken. He has sprained it pretty severely, that is all, but as the people up there thought it was broken I decided to let the impression prevail, and so I splinted it up and left it so. Don't you see, if we can keep him in bed under the belief that his limb is broken it gives us a chance to save the girl until Blatchford comes."

"I see, I see," cried Seraggs, as he slapped himself and fairly roared with laughter. "My George, doctor, but that is the best thing I ever heard of, and you deserve a medal for it. I'll put you against the world when it comes to scheming," and again Seraggs' feelings got the better of him and he burst out into another roar of laughter.

"Now, if I can keep Pearson in bed for a week," said the doctor, "you think you can accomplish your work, do you?"

"Yes, like a top. You just hold Pearson down on his back for six days, and I'm sure we'll come through all right."

and there was a happy glow and thoughtful when he was in his patient's presence.

"Do you think I am in a serious condition?" Pearson asked one day.

"Oh, not particularly so," the doctor replied. "You will be up and about in a few weeks."

"A few weeks?" Pearson repeated with a groan. "Can't I get about sooner than that?"

"Well, that depends, young man. If you keep perfectly quiet and lay flat on your back for ten days, or such a matter, you may be able to get out a little earlier."

"Two or three days passed thus, when one evening the doctor made his regular visit to find Pearson in a terrible fret.

"He has been wanting to get 'up all day," the attendant explained, "and I have had hard work to keep him in bed."

"Wanting to get up?" the doctor cried, in astonishment. "Why, what's come over you, Pearson?"

"I'm tired of lying here," Pearson said, "and I want to get out. My limb feels all right, now."

"Does, eh? Do you think it is all right?"

"It feels as though it must be."

"Don't matter anything about how it feels. The question is, is it all right?"

"I believe it is."

The doctor laughed heartily, then said:

"See here, Pearson, do you know how long it takes a broken limb to heal?"

"No."

"Well, it takes weeks. You must lay right there for a long time yet. And you," turning to the attendant, "must see that he does. The soreness is leaving his limb and he is getting on splendidly, and we can't afford to take any chances on having a relapse."

During the next two days the doctor managed to spend a great part of his time with his patient, resolved to keep him in bed if he had to do it by force. But the next day he was called out of town, and it was nearly night when he returned.

He repaired immediately to Pearson's room, and found Pearson gone, and the attendant staring about in wonder.

"Where's my patient?" the doctor demanded.

"I don't know," said the attendant. "He sent me out a few minutes since on an errand, and when I returned just now he was gone."

"The devil!" exclaimed the doctor, tearing out of the room and off to Seraggs' office, and astonishing that gentleman by bursting in on him with:

"Seraggs, the devil's out."

"What devil?" asked Seraggs.

"Why, Pearson, man."

"What?" cried Seraggs. "Is he out of bed?"

"Yes, and gone."

"The devil! And Blatchford has not come yet. I'm afraid he'll beat us after all."

"I kept him there as long as I could, I held him down for a week."

"Yes, and Blatchford ought to have been here yesterday. I think he'll surely come to-day. He telegraphed me that he was on the way."

"He'll probably get here to-night then, and all we can do is to wait."

"Yes, wait and watch. We must find Pearson and keep an eye on him. You have no idea where he has gone?"

"Not the least," but he is no doubt somewhere about town."

"Then we had better look him up."

The two men went out and began a quiet, unostentatious search for Pearson, and they kept it up until they had assured themselves perfectly that he was nowhere about. There had been no train out of town that afternoon, so they knew he had not gone away by rail.

After considering the matter for a few minutes they decided to inquire at the stables, and from the first one they visited they learned that Pearson had got a horse and rode out in the country.

"He's gone to Green's," said Seraggs.

"I'd bet a sleepskin on that."

"Yes, he's gone to Green's," replied the doctor, despairingly. "He's got the best of us after all."

"Maybe he has," said Seraggs, "but we'll see."

CHAPTER XXV.
SOME COUNTER-PLAYING.

Pearson had indeed gone to Green's. Never for a moment during all those days that Dr. Bascom kept him in bed had thoughts of Louise escaped him. Besides, he was haunted with a terrible fear. He had the unconscious natural to a guilty conscience, and every hour he was in dread lest his purpose and actions leak out and become public.

Not only was he in fear of Louise

The Saturday Edition

—OF—

The Chicago Herald

Is a handsome sixteen-page weekly newspaper, filled with the most entertaining reading that brilliant minds, well trained in every department of literature, can produce. It has the advantage of the fast-mail service and is delivered at the majority of post-offices on day of publication.

THE CHICAGO HERALD is the foremost journalistic champion of Western interests, and, believing that these are assailed by the protective tariff, it is an uncompromising opponent of a system that takes from the many to enrich the few. THE HERALD is broadly and progressively democratic in politics, but it is bound to no party, save as that party stands for principle and justice. Believing that the safety of the republic now demands a return to constitutional methods, to economy in administration, to the obliteration of war passions and to the summary defeat of the powerful interests that have allied themselves with the leaders of the republican party for the purpose of promoting selfish interests at the expense of the whole people, THE HERALD favors return of the democracy to power and will labor intelligently to that end.

A special feature of THE SATURDAY EDITION OF THE CHICAGO HERALD, and one to which much space is devoted, is the weekly record of the progress of the World's Fair, with fine illustrations. This alone makes it indispensable to those who intend to visit the fair, and to those who do not a comprehensive description will be the next best thing.

In addition to this THE SATURDAY EDITION OF THE HERALD contains a synopsis of the news of the week, full Market Reports, a Household Department, Completed Stories by popular authors, Book Reviews, "Gossip of the Stage," Base Ball, Turf and Athletic Sports, and last, but by no means least, the news of the world attractively presented and truthfully told. No better investment than a year's subscription can be made.

which is honor enough for any man of his size.

ren left for Boloxi, Miss., yesterday

Browne's parents, who have a winter

J. L. Sambaugh, foreman of the mill at McNaughton, was in town Saturday getting some repair work done, at the Rhinelander Iron Co.'s. The Mc-Naughton mill is doing excellent work, cutting from eighty to one hundred thousand daily in eleven hours.

J. S. Taylor was in the city a couple of days this week in the interests of the Northwestern Life Insurance Company. Mr. Taylor informs us that in 1891 the company's income was over twelve and a half million dollars; that the assets were $48,000,000; that the surplus was nearly $8,000,000—would go on with it, but we are out of figures.

Mr. Minahan, of this city, has now assumed the position of principal of the Myron H. McCord school at Rhinelander, owing to the continued illness of his daughter Miss Ellen, the former principal. Miss Mary Minahan, formerly a teacher in the same school, is at home nursing her sister. Her position is filled by a young lady from DePere.

J. W. Crockett, who is one of the bondsmen of the Taylors and Hickey, went over to Hixon Monday to see what the outlook was for the gang remaining to stand trial. They were still there, enjoying the glorious climate, and reassured their bondsmen that they not only intended to stay, but that everything looked promising for a good season's business and they couldn't afford to go.

The pedro club were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Reardon Monday evening. The meeting was the last of a very pleasant series of parties. The gentleman's prize, a pearl tie pin, was won by John Reardon. The ladies' prize, a finger ring set with rubies, was won by Mrs. Paul Browne. The successful competitors for last place, and on whom falls the honor of giving the club a banquet, were Paul Browne and Mrs. Dr. Daniels.

held at Wausau, March 23, 24 and 25, addresses will be made by the Hon.
Carter H. Harrison of the Chicago Times, Horace Rutledge, of the Milwaukee Sentinel, and the Rev. Mr. Mc Arthur, of Fort Atkinson. A special feature of the meeting will be the general discussion of practical questions relating to the newspaper business. The conductors of these discussions will not present papers or essays on the subject but will call upon different members to present their views, thus making the convention truly an "experience meeting."

Lumber buyers have been plentiful in this market lately.

rather lively trade during the coming season.

Johnny Murray was down from Manitowish Saturday on business.

While here he consulted a local physician with regard to a bad swelling which came on his neck some time ago as a result of a hard exposure and subsequent cold. The bunch refuses to leave and Johnny has nearly concluded to let it have its own way.

On Sunday, February 14, the boys in the camp of Gen. Morrisette, foreman for the Alexander Stewart Lumber Co., of this city, presented him with a solid gold watch and chain in token of their esteem. Chas. Wilson was master of ceremonies and W. C. Davenport made the presentation speech. Will has made two or three speeches of this nature lately, and is becoming known as the silver-tongued orator of the woods.—Wausau Pilot Review.

J. Stanley Grimes lectured on intemperance and drink at the M. E. church Sunday evening to a good sized audience, whom the veteran entertained in a capital manner. The old fellow has been on the rostrum for nearly forty years, and his observation has been both keen and accurate. The usual tirade of abuse which temperance orators readily heap upon those who happen to disagree with them on the best methods for checking the evils of drink, was conspicuously absent. His talk is a thoughtful and convincing one, and sets many a person thinking rightly on the question. Prof. Grimes gave a couple of lectures on phrenology Monday and Tuesday evenings which were well patronized.

Notice to Settle.

turing Co. will confer a favor on the undersigned and save trouble all around

C. E. Brady Assigned.

By reference to the legal published elsewhere, it will be seen that C. E.
Brady has made an assignment of his stock to Byron R. Silverthorn. The assets, about $4,000, are nearly the same as liabilities. Mr. Brady was thought to be doing a prosperous business, but had too much on the books.

ONE OF THE SECRETS

Of a Cook's success is in having proper Stove Furniture. There's no excuse for being without it when all kinds of tinware and cooking utensils are sold as cheap as we are unloading them. Granite ware is both cheap and attractive. We have it, and can show you good goods in every department.
Call and see, if you want to save money.

Change at the Giant Sleigh Works.

E. W. Anderson has purchased a half interest in the Giant Sleigh Manufacturing Co. and in company with A. M.
Rogers will conduct the business. The shop already enjoys a good business, and the new firm promise to add matterially to both amount of business done and styles of work. Ery. Anderson is well known to all the lumbermen of this section, having been in the same business at Eagle River for a number of years. He has had twenty years experience in the carriage and wagon business, at least 12 of which have been put in working on vehicles for this lumbering country.
He will have charge of the shop, and personally do the carriage and fine repair work. Mr. Rogers will do the outside hussling and will now find time to extend their business very materially by looking after more territory. Their shops are running full blast now, this season having been the best they have ever had for their Giant Sleigh sales.

A Lumberman's Rendezvous.

This term might be applied to Stevens Point, located on the Wisconsin Central Lines, at the gateway to the vast forest region which extends North to Lake Superior, a distance of 200 miles without a break, on account of its vast lumber interests. The Wisconsin River to which the lumbermen have given the familiar and somewhat affectionate title of "Old Wisconsin," not alone acts as a lumber feeder to the city by furnishing through its numerous tributaries an outlet for thousands of acres of pine in the upper country, but it furnishes a water power that is second only to that of Neenah and Menasha, which cities are also located on the "Central." Millions of feet of lumber are cut every year, giving employment to hundreds of men. In addition to the lumber trade, it has numerous other manufactures; it is here where the large car shops of the Wisconsin Central Lines are located.

MR. HENRY BENEDICT'S EXPERIENCE

In Two Life Insurance Companies.

BENEDICT & CO.
First Clothing Manufactory.
Cor. Grand Ave. and Fourth St.
MILWAUKEE, MARCH 1st, 1890.
To the NORTHWESTERN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.,
Milwaukee, Wis.

GENTLEMEN:—To say that I am surprised at the wide difference in dividends between your excellent company and the New York Life on two EXACTLY SIMILAR POLICIES which I carry in both companies, is drawing the case very mildly indeed. The following is a complete record for seven years:

Northwestern, Cash Dividends, - $692.62
New York Life, " " " 327.07
Difference in favor of the Northwestern, - $365.55
Being $38.48 more than double.

As no good company can object to having its dividend records placed before the public, you are at liberty to use this letter as you may think best. I have as you will see, very good reasons for regret at not taking your agents advice which was to place all of my insurance in the Northwestern. I hope others will profit by my experience. Yours truly,
HENRY BENEDICT.

TINKERING DEMOCRATS.

The Guerrilla Tactics of Peanut Politics.

The tariff programme of the democratic house is now apparently made up. Tariff smashing was discarded as a policy when Mills was defeated for the speakership. The policy is to be tariff tinkering. Mr. Springer, chairman of the committee on ways and means, has talked freely about his plans. He does not propose any general tariff bill, "horizontal" or other. His idea is to attack the present law in detail, offering one bill for free cotton ties, one for free bagging, one for free wool, and so on.

This is the old Indian policy of guerrilla warfare, and is peculiarly suited to the Tammany tribe. They dare not risk a pitched battle all along the line. They propose to skulk behind trees, make sudden sallies, pick off stragglers, and annoy their enemy in petty ways.

This is the customary democratic way of proceeding. There has never been a great national issue that they have met fairly and squarely. They have always tinkered and temporized. They tinkered at the slavery question, and after being in power for a decade they saw that question settled by a tremendous civil war. They tinkered at the financial question, and that was settled, and specie payments were resumed, against their protest that such a thing was utterly impossible, by a republican policy carried out by a republican administration.

In 1888 they had at last a definite issue. President Cleveland's tariff message outlined a general policy, and the battle was fought on a clearly outlined plan. But the democracy were not accustomed to fighting in the open, and for a principle, and they were beaten. Those of them who sincerely believed in that policy believed also that their defeat was only temporary; and the congressional elections of 1890, determined largely by the "McKinley scare," made them jubilant. They supposed the issue for 1892 was made and the candidate as good as nominated. But a year of operation of the new law has proved, even to its enemies, that it is a wise and statesman-like measure, and now the old element in the democratic party has once more gained the ascendancy and the word has gone forth that there is to be no fight on principle, but a return to the old methods.

The only thing desired by the democrats now dominant in their party is power and plunder. They have no principles. What they want is the offices. They will not fight in the open. They will not meet argument with argument, or set up principle against principle. They dare not attack the American wage-earners' tariff as a whole. They will pick out a few of its provisions and try to cut them off and thus weaken the whole measure. In short, they have discarded the Cleveland idea and have adopted the "peanut politics" of Hill, Gorman, Abbott and Tammany.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

OPINION OF THE PRESS.

"It is only in the continued supremacy of the republican party that our prosperity lies.—Oswego (N. Y.) Times.

"Speaker Crisp will have a gavel of Georgia pine. If he thinks he can knock out Tom Reed with anything as soft as that, the first attempt will correct his error.—Detroit Journal.

"The democrats have ceased to talk about 'grandfather's hat' since they have discovered that the president has brains enough to fill the biggest hat ever worn in this country.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Democratic organs are still mourning over pensioners. They are fearful that 'pensioners will destroy the country yet.' Such critics seem to forget that people are intelligent and have memories and know that 'pensioners' saved the country once, and from the hands of the same vandals who are now so anxious about it.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"The democrats are trying to make fun of Tom Reed. That gentleman will give the democrats more trouble this winter than if they had elected Springer and Mills and Hatch and McMillan, with Crisp thrown in as a starter. The democrats have their hands full just now. The nation is looking at them. Next spring stock will be taken of what they have done.—Springfield News.

"Never since the war has a president's message been better received than President Harrison's recent message. In its utterances it has been endorsed by the republican press of the entire country and the democratic papers have been compelled to acknowledge that it was a powerful and statesmanlike document.—Iowa State Register.

"The democratic free traders who advocate reductions in the tariff and free ships will derive small comfort from the report of the commissioner of navigation, which maintains that 'reductions of the tariff without exception have been advantageous to foreign rather than American ships,' and that the free importation of ships is really a measure of British suggestion, and 'it is the purchase of British-built iron or steel vessels that is meant and advocated.'—N. Y. Mail and Express.

An Unbroken Record.

The record of fraud and crime in the democratic party runs straight down from the presidential election of 1800, when Aaron Burr placed his thugs around the polls in New York city and made possible the election of Thomas Jefferson to the presidency. This democratic record has been maintained by the plagues of frauds of Louisiana and the Tweed frauds of New York and by such apt students of Burr as "Mike" Mullen of Cincinnati, "Sim" Coy of Indianapolis and "Joe" Mackin of Chicago. It is as a copyist of these men and as a follower of Aaron Burr that Gov. Hill is now posing, and it is only by a comical distortion of facts that any justification of his acts can be found in the record of the republican party.—Philadelphia Press.
